GALLUP — The anxieties of student and staff at the Diné Community College were evident as many of them asked questions to four candidates for college president.

The Diné Community College Board of Regents will soon pick a president for the school. At Friday's open forum in Tsaile, the faculty, students and public got a taste of the different administrations they may see in the fall.

The audience's questions reflected some of the troubles the college has been experiencing. People asked the candidates how they would seek more funding, secure accreditation, quell infighting and meet students' needs.

The four candidates are Merlee Arviso of Albuquerque, Cassandra Manuelito-Kerkvliet of Oregon, Anita Pfeiffer of Albuquerque and John Smelcer of Alaska...
